

Abstract of the Disclosure

- An inventory management system and method that allows an operator to manage an inventory for a system that has at least one piece of serviceable equipment with a plurality of replaceable components, wherein each of the
- 5 replaceable components has an expected lifetime based on a predetermined criteria which the an inventory management system observes via an inventory tracking system that uses parameters of expected use and predicted remaining life of the replaceable components to determine to manage the inventory.